RELIEF FROM TAX BURDEN IN SIGHT

Time Extended for Business Concerns Unable to Pay on Incomes.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 15.—Relief for the many large business concerns who were unable to pay their December installment of the income tax seems to be in sight. The house ways and means committee has practically agreed to report favorably a bill introduced by Representative Edmunds of Pennsylvania, whereby the penalty for failure to pay the December installment shall be eliminated and shall not be made to apply until the amount is still unpaid by March 15 next. The government will receive interest on the period between Dec. 15 and March 15.

Secretary Houston vigorously opposed any extension of time to taxpayers when the matter was first proposed simply because it was feared that no discrimination could be made between those who were really unable to pay and those who naturally wanted to use the money for other purposes. But on Dec. 15 new news and the collectors of internal revenue from all parts of the country reporting large sums unpaid, the seriousness of the situation is fully realized here.

Businessmen in Hard Straits.
Indeed, unless the government takes action as provided in the Edmunds resolution, some big corporations will be forced to the wall. The fact is the treasury department has at present no discretion whatsoever and the 5 per cent penalty is already in effect. The time is rapidly passing that ten days after the income tax shall have been due and been unpaid, the collector of internal revenue shall send out a warrant of distress. Within 30 days thereafter, collectors would be compelled under the law to force the sale of the assets of the delinquent in order to get the income taxes due the government. It is one of the most drastic laws on the statute books.

Businessmen have known what the penalties were, and the fact that they defaulted on Dec. 15 and preferred to take the consequences, is an indication that many of them were absolutely sincere in their protestations of inability to pay the tax. In several cases the collectors found the money, and some of them feel now that the banks must relent and furnish the funds. Rumors are also circulating that the federal board intends to lower the redemptive rate and that money will be more plentiful after the first of January, but there is no confirmation of the rumor.

Is Up to Congress.

Congress has the responsibility for the moment of helping the business men over a tight place. The treasury must follow the letter of the law or its various collectors will be liable to penalties for failure to collect taxes. The republicans in the house have sounded their colleagues in the senate, and the impression is general that both houses will pass the Edmunds resolution. It will be a relief to the business man and it will be a warning to taxpayers that no resolution of relief could be promised, but that was before Dec. 15, when it was to the interest of the treasury department to urge the payment of every cent that actually could be raised. At present the question is whether the government will actually invade the properties of big business houses to collect the taxes or whether it will extend the period of payment until March 15 and charge interest for the time extended.

Houston to Accept Measure.

All signs point to the passage of the resolution and though Secretary Houston has given no indication of his attitude, it is now believed that he will oppose it. For the alternative is either making the government stand the loss temporarily or forcing receiverships on many important business houses. The latter method has a serious effect on the entire business situation and the favorable attitude of the government is fully expected to operate as a palliative. There is no promise that any extension will be granted after March 15, nor can the action of congress be

Cattle Sale Success Through Daily League Advertising

"Wisconsin Animals for Wisconsin Farmers" seemed to be the slogan at the winter sale of the Waukesha Holstein Friesian Breeders association, held in Waukesha, Monday, Dec. 13. The sale was the second one advertised in the thirty daily newspapers comprising the Wisconsin Daily Newspaper League. The sale was most successful because of the fact that among the buyers were both prominent and wealthy breeders as well as those who are interested in quality animals at reasonable prices. Thanks to our advertising in the Wisconsin Daily Newspaper League, we have been able to appeal to both the large and the small breeders and show them that we have good buyers for all sizes of herds. We are especially pleased that all but two of our splendid animals stayed in Wisconsin. While we do not blame buyers from Texas, New York and Oregon for attending our sale, we much prefer to sell to Badger state breeders and keep our good Holstein strains in Wisconsin.

The next sale of the Waukesha Holstein association will be held January 12.

HORATIO SEYMOUR, NOTED NEWSPAPER WRITER, SUCCUMBS

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Horatio Seymour, editorial writer for the New York World, veteran Chicago newspaper man and one of the best known of the older journalists in the United States, died yesterday at his home, 530 West End avenue, New York. Mr. Seymour was a brilliant and masterful writer on economic questions.

He was born in Cayuga county, New York, in 1854 and was educated in the public schools of Racine, Wis., where he learned the printer's trade. He forsook the composing stick for the local editor of the Racine Advocate and Journal, later going to the Milwaukee News, where he served as reporter, city editor, and news editor. His work attracted the attention of William F. Story, then owner of the Chicago Times.

Came to Chicago in 1875. He became telegraph editor of the Times in 1875 and four years later became night editor. It was while on the Times that he wrote that now famous headline "Jerker to Jesus" on a story describing the hanging of a Negro who became a religious fanatic shortly before he mounted the scaffold. In later years Mr. Seymour referred to this as one of the "indiscretions of youth," but the incident has become one of the best known anecdotes of four-astate history.

In 1887 he went to the old Chicago Herald, then in its infancy, where he served as editorial writer, managing editor and editor until 1895. His editorials on the tariff written for the Herald, then a staunch democratic organ, during the second Cleveland campaign have been published in a volume, "Tariffists That Won." This book is considered one of the ablest of political-economic works written in this country.

Mr. Seymour left the Herald in 1895 to become editor and publisher of the Chronicle, John E. Walsh's paper, where he remained until 1907, when he became editorial supervisor of the New York World. For a few months in 1911 he left the World to become editor of the St. Louis Republic, but returned to the World in 1912. He has since written editorials that have been as late as last Wednesday when he suffered a heart attack.

He was married in 1876 in Racine to Annie E. Jones, who survives him. He is also survived by three daughters, Mrs. C. C. Grove and Mrs. Rex Jones of Chicago and Mrs. Joseph Albert of New York.

TWELVE BILLIONS PAID ON CHECKS OF U. S. CORPORATIONS

Washington, Dec. 18.—More than $12,128,000,000 has been paid out by the United States up to October 31 on checks drawn by the six government corporations and the railroad administration against their accounts on deposit with the treasury, according to a report of these transactions made public by Secretary Houston. Nearly half of the total checked out was on the account of the emergency fleet corporation.

Checking accounts were established by the government corporations with the treasury in 1918 instead of depositing their funds with private banks. The results of their transactions up to October 31 as reported by the secretary showed that the emergency fleet corporation had checked out $5,564,331,875 and had a balance of $83,932,465; the war finance corporation had checked out $2,987,964,687 and had a balance of $377,893,520; the United States Housing corporation withdrew $35,250,028 and had a balance of $2,959,446; the federal land banks' withdrawals amounted to $15,313,201 and their balance $1,369,350 and the railroad administration checked out $1,817,866,554 and had a balance of $74,524. The Russian bureau of the war trade board closed its account in September after having withdrawn a total of $13,333,773.

The plans evolved by the treasury for handling the accounts and disbursements of these agencies have been operated to the entire satisfaction of all concerned, Secretary Houston said.

PRODUCTS CO. IS "FARMERS' SAVIOR"

Hope to Sell 200 More Shares by Jan. 14 in Pooling Company.

Farmers of Rock county refused to be downed by their failure to sell the first 500 shares of stock for the Farm Products company and with renewed enthusiasm they will start again to sell the remaining 200 shares to allow the incorporation of the farmers pooling company. There was much debate as to the proper manner and time to continue the campaign during the county Farm Bureau meeting in the city hall yesterday but all agreed the products company "must be put over to save the farmers."

They voted to go out and tackle the problem again and report back the second Friday in January with the hopes of making the company successful in its efforts to start buying of grain seeds and farm material by pooling their orders for the spring farm work. It is necessary to sell at least an average of 25 shares of stock in each township. In many of the townships the members have been able to sell more than 25 shares, one to each farmer, which is the limit. Confidence was expressed by the farmers that if the campaign is continued in the spring that the products company would go forward successfully with a resounding bang.

Views of Members.
"Let's have that farm products company sold high," Homer Hagen, president of the Farm Bureau. "We must hold on for it is the salvation of the farmer. We have got to do something to get our money out of it only through co-operative organization."

An offer was made by Evansville representatives that if the company would agree to make Evansville the farm product center, they would take the responsibility of insuring the sale of the rest of the stock. Other members held that Janesville is the logical seat, being in the center of the county, the county seat and the office of the county agent.

"We do not want to drive anyone out of business but we do want something to say about the prices we shall be charged for farm equipment," declared W. C. Patterson, who acted as secretary of the meeting. "The farmer pays cash and does his own delivering and we believe that the mer-and Chicago was a mudhole with 4000 people, as told by the Diary of Aaron P. Walker, 84 years ago.

Compiled for the Gazette by Geo. Kalvelaga.

The rigors and hardships of the western pioneer 84 years ago in the days when Wisconsin territory was being settled are vividly portrayed in the diary of Aaron P. Walker, who with his two brothers, Alfred and Jason, were the first white settlers in what is now the town of Milton, Rock county. Satterly Clark is officially recognized as the first white man to enter the town of Milton.

He tells of his journey from his home in Bridgeton, Me., to Rock river and the home of Henry F. Jones, founder of Janesville, in the year of 1836. It took him just 34 days to make the trip. Relating the discovery of a series of lakes near Janes' home, he tells of establishing claims there. These are recognized now as Clear, Mud, Duck and Grass lakes, all in Milton township between Milton Junction and Lake Koshkonong.

Struck with the beauty of Rock river he set down in his diary that "This is the most delightful place I have ever known," and went on to tell of the enchantment of it all. He visited Chicago when the Indians were there, when it was a "big city of 4,000 souls," and the mud was knee deep in the streets.

The diary is in minute but beautiful script on a heavy paper. It is considered one of the most priceless pieces of Rock county's early history.

The Gazette is able to publish it through the kindness of its possessor, Frank Morris, of Milton Junction. Mr. Morris came into possession of the prized document upon the death of his father-in-law, R. J. Greenman, to whom it had been given by his cousin the late Prof. Henry Doty Mackin of Milton college, at the time of his death pastor of the South Memorial church, Menominee.

The diary follows in part:

DIARY OF AARON P. WALKER.

Monday, August 22, 1836—Started from Bridgeton, Me., for the west. My feelings were very much wrought up when I took leave of my brother and sister as I thought it uncertain whether I would ever see them in this world again. My heart was sad. I took the stage arriving in Portland at 8 p. m.

August 23—Took the boat for Boston in the evening.

August 24—Arrived in Boston at 7 a. m. Took the 1 o'clock car for Providence. There were 13 cars and I rode to the same locomotive and we went at the rate of 1 mile in 2 minutes over some parts of the road.

My baggage was covered on board the steamer at Providence and we left for New York. There was an old Englishman on board who had tipped the bottle too much and he became so inebriated they tied him to the captain where he drew a great crowd. He could use his tongue notwithstanding he had lost the use of his limbs. He was set on shore at the first landing place.

August 25—Arrived in New York this morning after a good voyage. Took the 5 o'clock boat for Boston.

"Dead broke" in Albany.

August 26—Our boiler broke down 100 miles from New York and we were detained 5 hours, so did not arrive in Albany until this morning. I had 25 cents in my pocket. I was disappointed indeed—1,400 miles to go, and I had only 25 cents in my pocket. He gave me $15 and I started on the 2 o'clock car for Schenectady arriving there at 6 o'clock. Took the 7 o'clock boat for Utica.

August 27—Arrived in Utica at 4 p. m. Took a fine boat to Utica.

August 28—Sunday, but no such day is known on the Erie canal. There are not many Indians on a journey on the canal. We pass boats every 15 minutes. Saw the German flats and the Syracuse salt works.

August 29—Arrived at Rochester at noon and stopped there about three hours to view the Genesee Falls where Sam Patch made his last jump. I saw an advertisement where another boat was going to enter the citizens by leaping from the same place next week.

August 30—Arrived at Albion at 4 o'clock this morning. Eight miles above I took a pocket boat which passed us and went up to Lockport to look about until the line boat came up. The locks were a climax to the canal. We left Lockport at 1 o'clock and came into Tonawanda Creek about sunset. About dusk we passed a boat freighted with Wisconsin emigrants and they boarded us with stones after one of our boatmen had reached out with a stick to overturn a kettle of soup they were making.

Held 4 days in Buffalo.

August 31—Arrived in Buffalo this morning.

Monday, Sept. 5—On board ship traveling 10 miles an hour after being detained in Buffalo on account of there being no wind.

September 6—The passengers are sick and not m. The wind is higher and we are sunning quartering with it which brings her up on one side now and then the sea of the past side now and then. Just hour has come. 10 a. m.—We are now at the mouth of the Detroit river. The scenery is beautiful.

September 7—In sight of Detroit. Saw the Indians assembled on the Canada side. Reached Detroit at 8 a. m. It is quite a business place but not as large as I supposed. They are not sick in Detroit—they give them 2 shillings to pay for a 6 penny worth and they keep the whole. Sail out of Detroit at 4 p. m. Went one mile and the wind went down so we cast anchor for the night.

September 8—Hoisted sail and passed through Lake St. Clair. 25 miles from Detroit. Within 2 miles of the St. Clair river we went aground. This was at 10 a. m. About 1 o'clock the steamer "Erie" which plies between Monroe and Fort Gratiot came up and hitched on. They tried to pull us out but couldn't. We not afraid once but soon were aground so we decided to lay peacefully for the night.

September 9—Still in the mud. All hands on board worked to get out. At last by the aid of the wind, lines and capstan, about 10 a. m. a steamer came up freighted with U. S. soldiers. They took off some of our weight and we started warping again, moving a little. The "Erie" came by and promised to come back in the morning to work 24 hours for $100. We kept warping all day and at last, with some success, getting the ship into the channel.

September 10—The "Erie" came at 10 a. m. and towed us up the St. Clair river.

September 11 (Sunday)—Got up and found we were under sail with 50 U. S. soldiers on board and entering Lake Huron.

September 12—Pleasant and warm. We are now in the Straits of Mackinac.

More Slow Going.

September 13—Head wind all night. Made about 10 miles in 12 hours. Three hundred miles from Chicago.

September 14—More wind, 200 miles from Chicago. Real dull time. Passed Green Day.

September 15—Cold and rainy. I gave the captain a shilling to let me get warm in the cabin. We are now opposite Milwaukee. The passengers for the territory offered $50 to be set ashore here but there is no harbor and it is very dangerous. Milwaukee is a new place. The first white settler went in there last winter and will be the largest place on the lake except Chicago.

September 16—We are opposite Rock river. The town is called Racine. There are many Vermonters there, I am told.

September 17—We have made 12 miles the last 24 hours. Are opposite

Walker's Trip; How the West Looked in '36

Traveled 34 days going from Bridgeton, Me., to Portland, then to Boston, Providence and New York, up the Hudson to Albany, and by the Erie canal to Chicago, from Chicago to Rock river by foot.

"Flat broke" in Albany and detained four days in Buffalo because the wind was not strong enough for sailing.

Stuck in the mud two days near the St. Clair river. Saw Milwaukee as the leading Wisconsin city. Was set on shore at the first landing place.

Chicago, 4,000 inhabitants; oxen going through the streets; mud knee deep. Some Indians there.

Found Rock river settlers holding political caucuses on Sept. 29, 1836. "This is the most delightful place I have ever seen." Wrote in the diary of the land which was to be Janesville.

Saw camp of Indians north of Janes' tavern. Visited Lake Koshkonong and discovered Mud, Grass, Clear, and Duck lakes, north of Milton.

Esquimaux James, six feet tall, unshaved and peculiarly garbed.

the Erie river, hitting 1 mile an hour with Chicago, 20 miles away. Shall not be there this night.

Arrives in Chicago.

September 18 (Sunday)—The long sought place of fancy is now a reality. We arrived in Chicago at noon. The people came down from town to welcome us. I found the mud knee deep in the streets. The town is full of emigrants going north and west into the territory. I saw some Indians in town.

September 19—Clear and pleasant. The mud is not so deep. Went to the stage office with Friend Cogan. He will take stage for the Des Plaines river next morn. Start for the Illinois river where he takes steamboat passage to the Mississippi. I regret parting with him very much. I shall ever remember him as he is associated with my whole trip.

I shall now take a more particular view of this wonderful place whose history equals some of the tales of "Arabian Nights." In 1834 the prairie wolves were howling through the town. Now it is inhabited by 4,000 souls. There was a school here, wandered out to this place once or twice in the season. Now their harbor is filled with shipping and 1,000 different sails have sprung. Since navigation opened last spring. They talk about $25,000 for a house and lot as a man would do about the sale of a big or lamb in the East. The streets are full of flocks of teams of from four to six pair of oxen on a wagon loaded with oats, corn, peas, beans, pumpkins, melons, apples, etc. which they bring from 100 to 150 miles. It does not cost them anything to travel. They carry their own provisions, put bells on their oxen and turn them out on the prairie where they stop and sleep in their covered wagons. They are selling melons from 2 to four shillings, apples at 25 per dozen, oats 3 per bushel, butter 12 per pound.

$1.50 for Day Labor.

There are no good buildings in Chicago except the Lake House. The buildings are all very small. It is very expensive to build here. A house one and a half stories, 20 by 30, costs $2,000 and the lot $1,000 but money is scarce. Mechanics get from $3 to $4 per day. Day laborers get $1.50. Girls who do housework get from $2 to $3 per week. Board is from 45 to $12 per week two meals and had two lodgings at the Lake House and they made my bill $2.

September 20—1 a. m. Started by stage for Pleasant Prairie and arrived there at 1 o'clock p. m. Found Alfred and Joel. They were much surprised. Stopped over night in their cabin.

September 21—Went to Ellice river. September 22—Joel, Alfred and self started for Rock river with Joel's horse and some provisions. Reached Fox river and stayed over night in the public house.

September 23—Started before breakfast. Came onto Elk Horn Prairie, which forms a part of Big Foot called so on account of its looking like a man's leg and foot. Elk Horn jukes the leg. Came to Turtle creek which flows from a lake six miles north and empties into Rock river on the line between the Territory and Illinois Territory, 60 miles northeast of this.

Reached Rock River.

September 24—Arrived at Rock river about sunset. They had been holding a political caucus, it being two weeks before their election of county officers for the Territory. There were about 20 settlers standing off for their several places of residence. This is no place for Jacksonism among the settlers. As we walked up to the people standing about the house, we were interrogated by "Where are you from?" "Where are you going?" "Are you looking for claims?" While we were assured this was the best country in the world and here was the best chance for making claims we were told in the Territory I was tired and not in the best humor. So I told I cared nothing about their country or claims. I wanted to know where there was a claim of something to eat and a place to lay my bones that night.

James Was Big Man

I inquired of a bystander for Esquimaux James. He informed me that he was the gentleman whom I looked up and beheld a man who stood plumb six feet with a very imposing pair of black whiskers. His face looked as though it had not come in contact with a razor for two weeks. His legs were encased in moccasins, but when he put them in he made a mistake by putting his legs through a good third of a yard too far thereby cutting off all connection between them and the rest of his body. He was dressed in a pair of thick shoes. Around his upper story he wore a mackin which was not inclined to have any connection with his lower garments. To cap out he wore a coarse scal cap.

This was Esquimaux James whom I had been recommended to call upon as he was the principal character on the prairie. He invited us to go home with him which invitation we accepted. He laid his course to the north. We passed over a creek on a log, passed through a swamp, passed another creek, when we first set our eyes on the far famed Rock river. We passed up the river a half mile and came to James' residence on a claim which lay on the east side of the river. It had a log cabin in three sections, each 25 feet by 15, all connected. One end he occupies as a store room, the second as a kitchen, the third is not finished.

James Kept Boarders

They are mending it now and occupy it as a sleeping room. They have secured boarders, viz., Danis and wife who have a claim on the river two miles above Mr. Dixon and wife from Danville, Vt.; B. Jones and wife, a German single; I. James, cousin to the Esquimaux; Benton, who has a wife in New York; besides two or three persons who are looking for claims.

This Rock River hotel is the most northern house on Rock river, 12 miles from the state line, 3 miles from Wisconsin City, northwest, 65 miles from Lake Michigan, and 100 from Chicago, which lays southeast, 80 miles from the first landing place, 24 miles due east from the first landing place, 24 miles from the first landing place, 24 miles from the first landing place.

This is the finest country I have seen in the territory. Rock river is about 300 feet wide here. The land on the east side rises with a gradual ascent for 40 rods. The top of the bluffs is about 60 feet above the bed of the river. Then you come onto the large prairie. For 12 and 25 rods from the river bank it is almost level.

Let me two months and had two lodgings at the Lake House and they made my bill $2.

September 20—1 a. m. Started by stage for Pleasant Prairie and arrived there at 1 o'clock p. m. Found Alfred and Joel. They were much surprised. Stopped over night in their cabin.

September 21—Went to Ellice river. September 22—Joel, Alfred and self started for Rock river with Joel's horse and some provisions. Reached Fox river and stayed over night in the public house.

September 23—Started before breakfast. Came onto Elk Horn Prairie, which forms a part of Big Foot called so on account of its looking like a man's leg and foot. Elk Horn jukes the leg. Came to Turtle creek which flows from a lake six miles north and empties into Rock river on the line between the Territory and Illinois Territory, 60 miles northeast of this.

Reached Rock River.

September 24—Arrived at Rock river about sunset. They had been holding a political caucus, it being two weeks before their election of county officers for the Territory. There were about 20 settlers standing off for their several places of residence. This is no place for Jacksonism among the settlers. As we walked up to the people standing about the house, we were interrogated by "Where are you from?" "Where are you going?" "Are you looking for claims?" While we were assured this was the best country in the world and here was the best chance for making claims we were told in the Territory I was tired and not in the best humor. So I told I cared nothing about their country or claims. I wanted to know where there was a claim of something to eat and a place to lay my bones that night.

James Was Big Man

I inquired of a bystander for Esquimaux James. He informed me that he was the gentleman whom I looked up and beheld a man who stood plumb six feet with a very imposing pair of black whiskers. His face looked as though it had not come in contact with a razor for two weeks. His legs were encased in moccasins, but when he put them in he made a mistake by putting his legs through a good third of a yard too far thereby cutting off all connection between them and the rest of his body. He was dressed in a pair of thick shoes. Around his upper story he wore a mackin which was not inclined to have any connection with his lower garments. To cap out he wore a coarse scal cap.

This was Esquimaux James whom I had been recommended to call upon as he was the principal character on the prairie. He invited us to go home with him which invitation we accepted. He laid his course to the north. We passed over a creek on a log, passed through a swamp, passed another creek, when we first set our eyes on the far famed Rock river. We passed up the river a half mile and came to James' residence on a claim which lay on the east side of the river. It had a log cabin in three sections, each 25 feet by 15, all connected. One end he occupies as a store room, the second as a kitchen, the third is not finished.

James Kept Boarders

They are mending it now and occupy it as a sleeping room. They have secured boarders, viz., Danis and wife who have a claim on the river two miles above Mr. Dixon and wife from Danville, Vt.; B. Jones and wife, a German single; I. James, cousin to the Esquimaux; Benton, who has a wife in New York; besides two or three persons who are looking for claims.

Old Circus War Retold by David Watt

By DAVID W. WATT.

I have seen it stated that there will be a great circus war this summer. News comes that several of the smaller shows have been taken over by the Hagenback-Wallace interests, and that the John L. Robinson, of Cincinnati; the Sells-Floto, owned by Hummer & Bonville, Denver, Colorado; the "Yackee" Robinson and Walter L. Main will be consolidated with the Hagenback-Wallace shows. This will make a strong combination in fact one of the strongest ever put together in the circus and show world. The only other big combination shows in the field will be that of Ringling Bros. Some seem to think that this will mean a war. I do not, for these are the most costly experiments of the business world.

This carries me back to the early eighties, when the great Barnum & Bailey and the Adam Forepaugh shows were fighting for supremacy in the business, and literally throwing away thousands of dollars as this war continued until about the year 1900. The Adam Forepaugh show at that time opened for a two weeks' engagement at State and Twenty-second streets, Chicago, when about Mr. Forepaugh's engagement, on the opening day, James A. Bailey, P. T. Barnum's partner and half owner, the Hagenback-Wallace show walked into the main entrance and extending his hand to Adam Forepaugh, said:

"Adam, I am here to make peace and stop this throwing away of money when there is plenty of country for both shows. As glad to sign the peace terms, and the two great shows came out to the ticket wagon, drew away the show which one show was to take the western country one year and the other the next. The writer of this article which both shows lived content with the letter as long as they lived.

To give you something of the idea of the bitter war, which was waged between the two shows, I quote the following incident. It was early in April 1893 that the Barnum & Bailey show opened in Philadelphia, their winter quarters and the home of Forepaugh, for a two weeks' engagement, on North Broad street. No sooner were their dates up and the show was advertised, until all three of the Barnum advertising cars pulled into Philadelphia with some sixty advance men and bill posters, and hired a lot for the two weeks run on the same street only a few blocks south of the Forepaugh blocks. Two weeks they put up a bitter fight. P. T. Barnum being advertised to make a speech of ten minutes at every afternoon and evening performance. But this proved to be a bad move for the Barnum show for Adam Forepaugh had gathered several million dollars from all over the United States and nearly every dollar of it was invested in Philadelphia business property. The newspapers were not slow in telling the public, stating the great benefit which Forepaugh had been to his home city.

Several times during the engagement, as soon as the big crowd got into the show, Mr. Forepaugh would come out to the ticket wagon and say: "Dave, there's money in the show and hear what I have to say. I am here to make peace and stop this throwing away of money when there is plenty of country for both shows. As glad to sign the peace terms, and the two great shows came out to the ticket wagon, drew away the show which one show was to take the western country one year and the other the next. again it seems to rest from all exertions and lay in silent repose. I was sitting in the hotel, looking out over the city, when I saw a man in a dark suit and a white shirt, with a white necktie, walking towards me. He was a man of about 40 years of age, with a high forehead and a serious expression. He was walking with a slow, steady gait, and his hands were in his pockets. I was looking at him when he stopped in front of me. He looked at me for a moment, and then he spoke.

"October 10.—We took three small calves of broad, fat, kettle, cottage and started up Rock river. After getting on the river, we found a house where we could have some food. We went up to a small prairie, the same we looked at when we were here before and met with the chance for claiming, thought it the best chance we had found in the territory. I marked a claim. Joe marked a claim when we were here before. Jason selected a spot for his house on the banks of one and in the vicinity of three beautiful lakes, 100 rods from the prairie in the oak opening. I consider it one of the finest locations in the vicinity. It is about 6 miles from Rock river and 8 from Lake Koshongong. Dixon failed to show up and we camped all night.

October 16.—Morning came, but no breakfast. We waited for Dixon and went to James'. Got in about 3 p. m.

TALES OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

MRS. GORDON JUDSON looked at her watch, as she sat in the crowded ladies' waiting room of the Union Depot in Washington, D. C. She had been so preoccupied with her thoughts of the past two weeks, the ten minutes she had been waiting seemed to have fairly jumped into two. A woman whom she had not noticed before, must have also forgotten the passing of time, for together they joined the crowd on their way to the many trains.

The door swung back and forth as the stream of people came in and out. The woman in her excitement to get through the door, pushed Mr. Judson aside. "I wonder how any one can be so rude, even if one is in a hurry," she thought, as she stooped to pick up a magazine that had fallen to the floor. To her astonishment, a black velvet bag lay beside the book. She looked around—no one seemed interested in her or the bag. There was not a moment to lose, or she would miss her train, so picking them up she hurried through the gate and was soon seated in the Royal Blue Limited for Baltimore.

Mrs. Judson belonged to the smart set. Her husband, Gordon Judson, was well known in all the large eastern and southern cities as a shrewd business man, a man of wealth and everyone who had spent an hour in his company knew of his perfect devotion to his wife. At present, he was somewhere on the Gulf coast, looking after his interests in orange groves.

Mrs. Herbert Lee of Washington had insisted on Mrs. Judson making her a visit during her husband's absence. "Gladis Judson is entirely too attractive to spend her time alone while Gordon is away," Mrs. Lee had told her friends—so the two women who had been girl friends and room mates at school were again under one roof. One the hostess, the other the guest. Theater parties followed dances and automobile trips, and always Captain Trevers, who had won many honors and as many loves, was with the party.

The Judsons had been married for nearly three years and though belonging to the gay and wealthy set, there had never been the slightest scandal attached to their name.

Mrs. Judson, who was considered the most beautiful brunette in Baltimore, was also known as the most circum-spect. "Who is that charming woman dancing with Captain Trevers?" asked Mary Nell Lewis, one of the younger set, who's mamma at least had her eye on the handsome Captain for her daughter.

"She is some one from Baltimore who is visiting Mrs. Lee, and I can't help but notice, my dear, how she continually makes eyes at Captain Trevers." This last remark was from Betty Heald's mother, who's husband died some years before, and the family purse had dwindled down to the point where Betty, a cute little blonde, was expected to marry well and replenish it.

Betty wasn't particularly worried, as long as she could laugh, dance and have all the chocolate bonbons she could eat. The dance was given by Mrs. Clark Frizzell, Captain Trevers' sister, a widow with a fortune which would be the captain's some day.

The ball room of the New Ballard Hotel was ablaze with lights and flowers. The beautiful strains of Lionel Slater's orchestra could be heard at the far end of the conservatory where Captain Trevers had led Mrs. Judson before the waltz was quite over.

"Will you go with me for a canter on Chevy Chase tomorrow? I have a wonderful riding horse for you. My sister gave him to me when I returned from France." Mrs. Lee, who had been looking for the couple, came up in time to hear the conversation. "I will answer for her, captain, she surely will go—and turning to her friend, she said, 'Gladis, dear, you will find Captain Trevers a wonderful rider, and the nights are ideal now.' The following evening the moonlight lit the road far out of Washington, it was nearly midnight when they turned their horses' heads toward home—and somehow the wonderful night, the moon and Captain Trevers' love-making cast such a spell over Gladis Judson, that she forgot everything but that she had promised to elope with the captain the following night.

When she awoke the next morning, the sun was shining in her windows and the birds were singing (things do look different in the morning) she realized what she had done. Her perfectly discreet past and her husband's absolute faithfulness to her made her see the terrible mistake she had made. She hurriedly sent a note to Captain Trevers and kept to her room all that day, complaining of a severe headache. She must get back to have the house in readiness for Mr. Judson's return, a letter under his pillow with the same name signed to it as the one you sent me. If Mrs. Aldwell pays well for that letter, we can skip somewhere and she will, for she never would want old Aldwell to see it. If Mrs. Frizzell won't let me go tomorrow, I'll send this and the other two letters. Yours, MOLLY.

With trembling fingers another letter was taken from the bag: Jacksonville, Fla., May 27th, —

My Dear, Dear Mrs. Aldwell: I am so miserable since you left, why did you friends in New York take you from me just when I had discovered how adorable you are? I am leaving to Mr. Bert Hammel, Twenty-third street, New York, and read as follows:

Washington, D. C., June 9th, —

Dear Bert: I thought I'd send back the letter you copied from Mrs. Aldwell, but as I had a tiff with Mrs. Frizzell yesterday, I just up and tells her I was going to quit. Funny, isn't it, when I was cleaning up Captain Trevers' room (he's her brother, who has just come from France). I find a letter under his pillow with the same name signed to it as the one you sent me. If Mrs. Aldwell pays well for that letter, we can skip somewhere and she will, for she never would want old Aldwell to see it. If Mrs. Frizzell won't let me go tomorrow, I'll send this and the other two letters. Yours, MOLLY.

With trembling fingers another letter was taken from the bag: Jacksonville, Fla., May 27th, —

My Dear, Dear Mrs. Aldwell: I am so miserable since you left, why did you friends in New York take you from me just when I had discovered how adorable you are? I am leaving in a few days for Baltimore. My wife, who is the most devoted of wives has been visiting her school chum, Mrs. Lee, she will meet me in Baltimore on my return. So we met and parted, and must forget, remembering, my dear, that you have an adoring husband and a wife who's every thought is for me alone. Au revoir, GORDON JUDSON.

Mrs. Judson remembered the substance of her letter to the captain: Washington, D. C., June 9th, —

Dear Captain Trevers: This beautiful morning makes me realize how indiscreet I was when I promised to elope with you. You were charming company, and I was a foolish woman. I am leaving immediately for home to meet my husband who is returning from Jacksonville, Fla.

A soldier and a gentleman will surely forget this little affair—and me. GLADIS JUDSON.

The bag slid slowly to the floor. The letters so strangely brought together lay in her lap. One by one, bit by bit she tore them into tiny pieces and threw them out of the window.

"All out for Baltimore," shouted the porter; Mrs. Judson arose, adjusted her hat and as the smiling face of her husband appeared through the window, she started toward the door.

Well—she thought, it's an even break.

CAROL DODGE came into the room where her mother and sister were sitting.

"Russell went home a little later than usual, didn't he?" her mother remarked as she put up her sewing.

"Why, yes, a little," Carol replied, "but only a few minutes, I think."

"Well, you better be going to bed, if you are going to do so much tomorrow. Good night," she added, as Carol's younger sister left the room.

Carol was not long in following her sister, and in the privacy of their room she appeared very much awake. Her sister, Virginia, immediately surmised that the bright eyes and flushed cheeks were the result of a serious talk with Russell. But without a sign of interest she slowly began to prepare for bed.

At last Carol could resist no longer. "Virginia, do you like Russell?" she asked.

"Oh, yes, Carol, of course I do. Is that what all the excitement is about?"

Carol wheeled suddenly. "Did you notice anything the matter?"

"Why, no, dear, but I know something was on your mind. But you'd better go to sleep now and dream on it," and with this she dismissed the subject.

Three days later was Carol's birthday day, but not one in the house noticed how eagerly she waited for night to come that would bring Russell to the house. Not one even noticed that she took particular pains with her hair and dress, except with a casual remark that she looked very pretty with her twenty Summers.

Six o'clock brought the florist's box with the largest bunch of roses that had ever been brought into the Dodge household. Carol carefully selected three of the daintiest blossoms and pinned them in her waist.

Finally her patience was rewarded with the coming of Russell. Hardly had he entered the door when he handed her a large box with the words, "Many happy returns, Carol."

With one look Carol set the box on the table.

"Thank you, Russell," and with this she seated herself on the opposite side of the room.

Russell tried in vain to coax her out of this sudden change, but not a word did the least good. Finally he said he must go, and with a careless good-night, Carol ran up the stairs to her own room. The astonished Russell left the house trying to remember what he had said to make Carol feel like this, but soon began to think he had done all he could, and would have to leave the rest to her.

Meanwhile Carol had gone to her room and flung the box in her sister's lap hurriedly began to undress. "Why, what's this, Carol?" asked Virginia, as she untied the wrapper.

"Russell's birthday gift to me."

"Why, Carol Dodge, do you mean to tell me that you didn't even open it?" "Well, Virginia, that's exactly what I didn't do, and I wish you wouldn't ever say another thing about it. And tell mother Russell won't be coming here any more."

Virginia opened her eyes in perfect bewilderment. Then she untied the gold ribbon and lifted the cover of the box.

"Oh, my goodness, look at this wonderful box of candy," she exclaimed, as she passed it to her sister. But Carol, under cover of the bed clothes, only shook her head. Carefree Virginia calmly selected the biggest piece in sight and began to eat with delight. Then she re-covered the box and crept into bed with her sister.

The next day failed to bring anything to light. Carol refused to eat a single piece of candy and no one in the house could imagine what was the matter with her and Russell. Even Russell himself, as he sat at home near the telephone, was wondering why he had been treated so coolly.

Finally, he closed his lips with a stubborn snap. "She'll just have to come to me first, this time," he resolved, and immediately called up her house to say he was going away on a business trip. Even this failed to bring any response, and he left the city with a heavy heart, for after all he knew he still cared for his beloved Carol.

The next Sunday Virginia had three girl friends at the house. The first thing she did was to bring out the box of candy and pass it to her friends. Carol turned her head away as she saw the beautiful box start on its rounds among the guests, and with freezing coldness refused her share as it passed her!

"Isn't this just glorious candy?" Virginia asked as she nibbled at a large caramel.

"I should say so," a pretty girl of 16 replied. "I'd like to see my sister giving me a box her friend gave her."

"That's right, Amy," came another voice, "my sister wouldn't give me a piece, let alone a boxful."

"Well, you ought to have my sister," Virginia struck in again, as she took another piece of candy. Then she exclaimed, "Oh, goodness, what have I got!" Gratefully taking out the piece of candy she drew a hard object into sight. "Excuse me a minute," she added as she left the room.

In a second she was back and called her sister to the door. Pressing something into her hand, she said, "Take this upstairs. It's something I found in that piece of candy."

Carol hurried upstairs, and then opened her hand. There gleaming in the sunlight was the most brilliant diamond she had ever seen. Gradually her color deepened, and then with a cry she flung herself on the bed.

"Oh, Russell," she murmured, "I see it all now. What a terribly selfish girl I have been."

Then with one spring she hurried to the telephone and left a message for Russell to call immediately when he arrived in town. She didn't have long to wait, for that night Russell came in answer to her call.

"Oh, Russell, I'm so ashamed of myself I don't know what to say. But I'm going to tell you the truth and not try to spare myself. I was very angry at you for giving me that box of candy for my birthday, especially after our talk the other night," she added shyly.

"I know, dear, and I don't blame you. After telling you I loved you so much, and then asking you to marry me, of course you thought I would give you the ring for your birthday. "Yes, but Russell, my selfishness can not be explained. The only thing I can do now is just to love you so much you will forget."

"I have forgotten already, Carol, and I think it will teach us both a lesson not to take so much for granted."

"Indeed it will, but Russell," she added, shaking her curly head, "when you give another girl a box of candy, don't leave her until she has eaten every piece."

"You're the only one now that will ever eat my candy, and I shall watch you very closely."

And then they started life together.

"Are you fond of fiction?" "I used to be, but my husband has got me fed up on it."

angels have told me the whole story—about myself. I am a failure—a miserable failure!" He gasped for breath. "I was once in love with a girl—in heaven—and her name was Edith! I loved her, but I could not have her because I had been a murderer in my last incarnation! Edith loved me, but she could not give herself to me, until I had paid for my sin—until I had made good—made good! I begged for another chance, and I was permitted to return to the earth to prove that I could go straight and live a decent life. Edith's love was so great that she too, returned to the earth, to be near me. But upon taking physical bodies again, our spirit life was forgotten—and we couldn't remember—though we have been continually haunted by our shadowy other self! And now—here I am—dying—still a criminal! I have failed—failed again—miserably!"

The man fought for breath, gasped, and his eyes stared into space. He was dead!

"Edith! Edith!" repeated one of the gang. "I never knew that 'Angel' had a girl! Goodby, old pal, and he touched 'Angel's' forehead tenderly, 'Goodby, and here's hopin' you'll have better luck next time."

"Wait!" said the mysterious "miser" of the village. "I'll tell yer what I'll do! I'll make a clean breast of my identity and give you fellers half of my coin—eh?"

"We don't want your coin!" suddenly ejaculated Jim Pruitt. "But we want you! We thought you were just what you are supposed to be in this town, and we came in to relieve you of your surplus change, but we've changed our minds! You aren't 'Cabin' Wilkins, the miser, but 'Sure-Shot' Daley, the bandit and bank robber! I recognize your face now—saw your picture just yesterday in a paper! There's a reward of $5,000 out for you, and we might just as well have it!

Fellers, collect up the dough and we'll take this guy to the police station. I'd rather be the feller to catch a bandit, and get the reward, than to be the bandit! Eh? What do you say, fellers?"

"I'm sure you will be interested," said the young man. "It's the 'Ring,' you know; the 'Ring.'"

"The ring?" echoed the girl hopefully.

"Wagnerian opera."

LOOK, fellers, he's counting his money! It's piled up two feet high on a table—gold, silver, paper!"

Four young men crept up excitedly to the cabin window. There sat old "Cabin" Wilkins, as he was known in the town, sitting at a rickety old table, with a dim kerosene lamp, counting his money—the accumulated fortune of a life time! The old man was asserting it into piles, and the gold actually glistened and shone, while the miser would handle and fondle it affectionately and smile with a look of infinite satisfaction, and then cast a few swift glances about the room to make sure that he was alone.

"Damn funny the old geezer didn't pull down the curtain!" whispered one of the gang.

"Ah, he's too old to have any sense!" replied a companion.

"Fellers, it's mighty easy pickin'," observed another. "We can sneak in to the back window, cover the old man, and get away with his coin before he knows that we've been here! What do you say?"

"We're game!" the others whispered, and Jim Pruitt, the boss of the party, led the way around to the back of the cabin. They located the rear window. Then, Jimmying it quietly, slowly, they succeeded in getting it open without disturbing the old miser. His mind was concentrated on his regular nightly sport, the counting and recounting of his hoarded gold.

Pruitt was the first to crawl through the window and into the cabin. Two others followed him. Pruitt drew his gun, and waited for the other members of the gang to get into the room. Suddenly "Cabin" Wilkins looked around, and either saw the intruders' shadow or sensed their presence, for he sprang to his feet catlike, and grabbed a cane which was close to his chair.

Then, turning around, he faced Pruitt and his four companions. His face was like that of a hunted animal, and his breath came in quick, short gasps. He was looking into the muzzle of Pruitt's gun! For an instant nobody spoke. The cabin was as silent as the woods which were around it, and the only sound that was heard was the hooting of an owl out in a nearby tree, and the slow ticking of a clock on a mantle-piece.

"Cabin" Wilkins smiled. "Young men," he said, in the trembling voice of old age, "I take it you have come to steal from an old man—to take from him the accumulations of a lifetime, to leave him penniless and helpless, alone in these woods, without friend or relation! Boys, you do not look to me like thugs or bandits or criminals. You are just young men of the village, I take it, and this is the first attempt of this kind you have ever made. May the good God see to it that it is the last—and that you repent—and resolve to live honest and upright lives!"

Jim Pruitt moved up a little closer to the old man. "That's enough of that bunk, 'Cabin,'" he said roughly. "We didn't come in here tonight to hear you preach a sermon, or to listen to you hand out some fatherly advice. We came in here to get our hands on that coin there on the table, and we're going to get it, and—"

"But wait—wait!" the old man interrupted. "Wait! I had a boy once—he was just like you, loving adventure and excitement, and he heard his country's call in England when the German emperor tried to lick the world, and he joined the English army, and now—now—he lies out there in No Man's Land in a soldier's grave! He was my own son—the only relative I had in the world—he paid the supreme price—and now—now—"

The old man's eyes filled with tears, and he took a soiled, bandana handkerchief out of his pocket and sobbed bitterly.

"Well, I'll be blowed!" exclaimed Pruitt, lowering his gun, and almost forgetting that he had it, still keeping his eye on the glittering gold that lay on the table.

"What shall we do, fellers?" he asked, turning to his companions. "This is like taking milk from babies, bread from starving children! Shall we—"

Old "Cabin" Wilkins fell heavily to the floor, and on his knees he looked imploringly up into the eyes of Jim Pruitt. He presented a strange spectacle—an old man, feeble with age, with shaggy white whiskers, crouching there in his cabin, trembling with fear in the presence of a band of robbers!

"Ah, hell, let's tie the old man and get out of here with the money!" said one of the gang, decidedly. "We need more than old 'Cabin' does! He's a miser here for a couple of years. Nobody knows anything about him—and why should we—"

A terrible, savage look came over the face of old "Cabin" Wilkins. He sprang to his feet like a panther, grabbed the gun out of Jim Pruitt's hand, and opened fire into the crowd!

The men instinctively ducked, and Pruitt sprang upon the old man's shoulders, but was thrown heavily to the floor.

General rough-house ensued, and somebody clutched "Cabin's" whiskers and peeled them off, and they revealed—a man not more than forty, having the hardened, desperate face of a criminal!

"Who are you, anyhow?" Jim Pruitt exclaimed, looking straight into the black eyes of the prisoner. The man smiled grimly. "No matter who I am, he said. 'You fellers have won—now take the money and get out!'"

Others of the company were picking up gold and silver pieces and currency from off the floor, and piling them on the table. "Take the money, damn ye!" hissed the prisoner. "But—er—leave me a little change—to—er—"

"Clear out of the country!" one of the fellows finished.

The Failure of "Angel" Jim

each knew his role and played it to perfection. They were bold, and didn't even attempt to put on masks!

One of the stenographers, a petite, attractive young girl, kept her eyes riveted upon one of the men. He soon felt her gaze, and he returned it. "Angel" Jim Clough, as he was known by his eighteenth street pals, felt unusually ill at ease, and the more he looked at the girl the more convinced he was that he knew her or at least had met her somewhere. The girl, too, seemed to be trying to recognize or place him, and he was quite as positive that they had met at some time. Neither could understand it, the drawing to each other, the almost uncanny influence which one seemed to wield over the other. The girl appealed to "Angel" Jim like an old friend or pal—a girl he had once known, and whose impression she had made upon him was so strong that he forgot for the moment his purpose in the office of

R. Davis & Company.

The safe was quickly robbed of its valuables, and the money and securities were deposited in a bag. Suddenly the girl who had so mysteriously appealed to "Angel" Jim took a short-hand notebook out of a pocket in her dress, and scribbled something on a sheet of paper and handed it to the astonished robber.

Their work completed, they were out of the door in an instant.

Recovering their senses, the men in the offices found their guns and opened fire upon the fleeing bandits. "Angel" Jim got a bullet in his body, and fell over. His companions picked him up and they managed to get away.

Getting into their room, they laid "Angel" Jim upon an old cot in a corner. The room was dark, having no window, and they had to light a candle. "Angel," said the boss of the gang, "We'll have to get the doc, eh?"

"I'm thinkin' I'm pretty well shot up," he answered. One of the men was straightway sent to summon Dr. Goldthwait, who was an old physician, living in the same tenement house, a man who dispensed dope quite freely and practiced largely among the criminal classes of the city.

"Angel" Jim was in fearful pain, and though he remembered the note that the girl in the office of R. Davis & Co., had handed him, and he wanted to read it the worst way, his arms were paralyzed and he couldn't move. Gradually he sunk into a stupor or unconsciousness.

"Angel" Jim was both a mystery and a source of amusement to his pals. They had nicknamed him "Angel" because he was repeatedly talking about death and about angels and spirits, and was never so happy as when discussing the "future life." He read books continually about spirit communication, and about reincarnation, and more than once he had said,

"Fellers, I don't know why I am here—but I know I don't belong in this bunch or in this line of business! I'm switched off somehow. There was a slip somewhere in my reincarnation, that's all! And then his companions would laugh, and ridicule him, "Angel," they would say, "If you dozed considerable we'd say that that was what was the matter with you, but as it is, well you're just plain batty; that's all—there's bats in your belfry!"

There was a knock at the door. Two of the fellows jumped to their feet. Opening the door cautiously, they admitted Dr. Goldthwait, who came in, set his medicine case down, and turned to the cot, went to work methodically upon his patient.

"Angel" Jim opened his eyes. "Doc," he whispered, "I'm pretty well shot up, but I've got a note in my pocket—there—read it to me—quick! I must know what it says before I croak!"

The doctor fumbled in the man's pocket, and pulled out a piece of paper. He read aloud, "I don't know where I have seen you, but I know you. You must not follow this business—you will break my heart."

"My God!" "Angel" gasped, and in the dim, flickering light of the candle the men could see their pal sink into unconsciousness, but with a wonderful look of happiness upon his face. They stood over him, with the doctor, and were silent. One of them took the crumpled piece of paper out of the man's hand and laid it on the old rickety table.

"Men, he is dying!" said Dr. Goldthwait.

Suddenly, "Angel" Jim seemed to recover consciousness and he looked up into the anxious faces of his pals, and smiled. "Fellers," he said, "I know it all now—I understand. I have been to the shores of the 'other world,' and

Fundamental Facts of Our Business Situation

By Charles H. Sabin Pres. of Guarantee Trust Co., New York

There are some important considerations which should be borne in mind in the present situation by all who seek to analyze it accurately. In the first place, there is nothing mysterious or unexpected about the present condition in either the commodity or security markets. For months it has been certain, and it has been repeatedly so stated by students of the situation, that there must be a liquidation of commodities, securities and labor before this country could fully recover from the effects of the war and be restored to anything like a normal business basis. It was inevitable that the processes of readjustment should be painful in many respects and in many instances, but that they were and are inevitable was a matter of common knowledge among all who seek to study these problems apart from immediate self-interest. The regrettable thing is that, as commodity and security prices reached points far above their real value in the boom period, so they are today falling to points far below their real value. Necessary liquidation is proceeding after the manner anticipated, on the whole, but there are yet several steps to be taken.

Perhaps the most important of these is for retail merchants to realize that they too must meet the inevitable economic trend and adjust their prices to meet the new conditions. Only in that manner can the situation be stabilized and frozen credits thawed out. I know this is not a pleasant message, but I am firmly convinced that the sooner such a policy is pursued, the less costly and painful it will be to all concerned. The process of deflation must include all the elements in the body economic sooner or later and there can be no escape from the inexorable law which directs it. Dodging the facts or attempting to postpone the inevitable will not bring immunity to anyone, whether his interest lies in production or distribution, capital or labor.

The unfortunate effect in such a situation is always that many innocent parties are made to suffer through ignorance and misunderstandings and also through the spread of false and malicious rumors which such conditions always inspire, with a resulting loss of confidence and panic sales.

There is so much in the present situation to inspire confidence and hope for the future that it is little short of criminal for anyone to paint the picture so blackly, through either ignorance or intent, that these vital facts are obscured. To cite a few pertinent facts: This country will harvest this year one of the largest crops in its history; its transportation congestion has been relieved and its railroad system is for the first time in a decade on a sound financial and operating basis; we have passed through a national election and assured four years of sane administration of public affairs; our banking system has withstood the greatest credit strain in its history and is on a sound and workable basis; the accumulated surplus of five years of splendid prosperity is stored in many ways for our continued use; the markets of the world demand our products and a great mercantile marine is preparing to transport them; this country has not been overbuilt or overextended in any of its underlying activities, and faces no program of readjustment along these lines such as usually precipitates panic conditions. We are in a sound financial, industrial and political condition than any important nation in the world.

These are the simple fundamental facts of our business situation and to consider the present reaction as anything but a temporary setback from the destruction, inflation, extravagance and unsound economic conditions precipitated by the war is simply not to reckon with the truth. It remains true today, as it has since this country was first settled, that "any man who sells the United States of America short" is in the long run certain to lose and, furthermore, any man who seeks to profit by the misfortunes of others in the circulation of misstatements or false rumors, hoping to precipitate further reactions, should be branded as a public enemy.

This is a time for clear thinking and courageous acting and in the proportion that such factors are brought to bear with wisdom and follow when this spell of reaction has run its course.

GRAIN

Weekly Review.
Chicago, Dec. 18.—Bigger demand from Europe this week has made the wheat market jump. Notwithstanding bearish crop reports and despite nervousness over the economic outlook, wheat this morning advanced with a week ago was 5 to 7 1/2c higher. Corn was 1/4c off to 1 1/2c, oats unchanged to 1c lower and provisions varying from 50c decline to 45c gain.

Exporters were buyers of grain, both before and after the government report showing grain crops in the United States were better than had been generally supposed. Whether or not European demand for wheat was accelerated by the fact that the agency legislation in Congress to afford relief to farmers did not become evident at the time of the report, it is clear that at times the amount of foreign purchasing was more than double the normal daily average. Export advances meanwhile in sterling exchange tended to help the wheat market. On the other hand, the estimated surplus of Australian wheat. On the other hand, the estimated surplus of Australian wheat. On the other hand, the estimated surplus of Australian wheat.

Corn and oats proved relatively weak owing to the big supply. Provisions showed much irregularity, influenced by the circumstances that price changes for grain and hogs were often directly conflicting.

Chicago Wheat. Wheat got an irregular start today. Failure of the British to take wheat overnight being responsible for some of the heavy local element. A house with eastern connections became a good buyer, March delivery on the decline, and a rally set in which brought prices above the low point of 1 1/2c to 2c higher, with March 1 1/2c@1 1/4c and May 1 1/2c@1 1/4c followed by declines.

Export demand was not in evidence but the market showed a firm under tone the greater part of the day and averaged higher. On general selling the market in wheat and closed 1 1/2c@1 1/4c net lower, with March 1 1/2c@1 1/4c.

Strength in wheat was responsible for a higher range in corn. The feature of the early trading was the selling of this corn by commission houses with country connections. Initial quotations, which ranged from 1 1/2c to 1 3/4c higher, including May 1 1/2c@1 1/4c, were followed by further upturns.

Corn showed rather independent strength and at the high point may showed that the 1/2c above the inside figure for two days ago. The heavy buying today was for the purpose of taking profits on previous sales. Closing was firm 1 1/2c@1 1/4c net higher, with May 1 1/2c@1 1/4c.

There was a good class of buying in evidence in oats but the strength came mainly from other grains. After starting 1/2c@1 1/4c, the market scored further advances. Provisions reflected the strength in grain.

CHRISTMAS RUSH ON AT POST OFFICE

Parcel Post Business Doubles—Express Co. Reports No Increase.

Business at the postoffice increased more than 100 per cent yesterday over the previous day and clerks were busy all day taking in packages sent out for Christmas by people in Janesville.

One extra clerk is now working at the postoffice and three more will be employed during the Christmas rush. Joe Woodie, Janesville, for-merly of the railway mail service, is now stationed at the postoffice. Two hundred mail sacks containing mostly parcels were sent out by the postoffice yesterday and the business at the office today continued just as strong. The normal amount of mail received at the postoffice is 100 sacks, and the total incoming averages 110. Yesterday 275 were brought in from the depots.

"People are taking much more care than they ever have before in wrapping the packages securely," said Postmaster J. J. Cunningham. "The express companies have no rush at all according to the manager of the local office of the American Railway Express company here today when asked about the business." "Rush," he said. "There is no such thing here. Business during the last few weeks has been slack to an alarming extent, and instead of employing extra men to take care of the Christmas rush, which we have experienced in former years, we have discharged four men, and before the year is over we will discharge two more because of the slackness in business."

U. W. TO TIGHTEN SOURCES OF NEWS

Madison—The tightening of the news sources in the offices of the dean of men and the dean of women at the university has resulted from a recent agitation over newspaper stories of university life which, it was claimed by the deans, have been "faked" by reporters. It was said that hereafter interviews concerning student activities and faculty opinions will be spottily given.

This action resulted after a student mass meeting of Tuesday evening, called according to Frank Weston, former football captain and chairman, for the purpose of "distilling and fostering a better understanding between the university, its students and faculty and the people of Wisconsin." Scott H. Goodnight, dean of men, had said in the meeting that the stories attributed to him in certain state papers were no bonafide, but were fabrications, which carried the wrong impression to readers.

Augustus Z. Grethach, Marshfield, Wis., a student and former newspaper man, declared that much of the blame for the stories lay with the persons interviewed, "who often made remarks that sounded well in conversation but looked bad in print." He defended the newspapers.

Dean Seltzer in an address to the students said that the trouble "with a reputation of truthfulness is that those outside a university come to believe that there is a minimum of work and a maximum of frivolity. The truth really is that students must work in order to remain here, and by far the great majority do attend seriously to their studies."

Students were urged to do everything they could to overcome the false impressions that were said to have been carried throughout the state by newspapers.

PROMINENT RACINE WOMAN GETS DIVORCE
Racine—Mrs. Gertrude Allen Walters was granted a divorce from Henry Mitchell Walters, Jr., in the circuit court Friday on the grounds of a voluntary separation for five years. Under the terms of the decision of the court the defendant must transfer to the plaintiff $10,000 in securities as a final division of the estate of the defendant. The plaintiff and defendant are both prominent in the city.

RIGHT OF WOMEN TO HOLD OFFICE UPHOLD
Detroit, Dec. 15.—The right of women to hold elective office in Michigan was upheld by Justice Mandel in circuit court here. Under the Michigan law, the court held the only qualifications for an office holder are citizenship and election rights, and the extension of suffrage to women makes them electors.

WHOLESALE PRICES MAKE BIGGEST DROP SINCE WAR
Washington.—Wholesale prices of commodities were lower last month than at any one time since the war, according to figures announced by the department of labor. The wholesale price index dropped 8 per cent more in November than in the preceding month and 24 per cent below the peak of high prices last May, the bureau says.

STURGEON HAY—A number of influential and progressive farmers, representative of all parts of Door county, are working out preliminary plans for the formation of a branch of the Farm Bureau federation.

CHARACTERIZES AS PREPOSTEROUS SUM SOUGHT FOR ARMY

Rep. Daniel R. Anthony.
Rep. Daniel R. Anthony, Republican, of Kansas, in charge of the army bill before the new committee of the house, characterizes as "preposterous" the request of the war department for approximately $600,000,000.

NOTED TAPESTRIES PAWNED FOR BREAD

Vienna.—When the House of Hapsburg acquired the 900 or more tapestries comprising the most superb collection in the world its members hardly foresaw that some day they would be pawned to buy bread for a succeeding republic.

The Reparations Commission having given its consent the government is now trying to raise enough money on these tapestries to purchase 50,000 tons of flour against the imminent exhaustion of the supply on hand. The bread ration has been reduced to 20 per cent wheat flour content, with 50 per cent corn meal and 30 percent rye. The best that can be said of the resulting bread is that a very hungry person can eat a little of it.

It is understood that a movement is on foot for the organization of an international syndicate to advance the required amount of cash. The plan contemplates that the tapestries pledged will be carefully selected from the various schools represented in the collection and these in part or in whole will be put on exhibition in the great cities of Europe and America.

For some months the finest of these weaves have been on exhibition in the Belvedere Palace here, exposed for the first time to the public. Always they have been kept either in the Hofburg or Schoenbrunn, brought out on rare state occasions in the days of the monarchy to decorate the great salons.

The largest of them being taken to space on the sidewalks of the vast apartments in the Belvedere, where daily hundreds of persons pay the small admission fee to feast on the wealth of color, walls in every room artists at easels copy them.

Uncertainty Prevails in Cabbage Market

Madison.—Uncertainty prevails among producers and dealers in cabbage according to the news letter of the division of markets soon to be issued. There has been no decided change in the market since the opening of the season, it says.

"Shipments are keeping up due to willingness of growers and dealers to sell even at prevailing prices," the letter says. Shipments up to and including Dec. 9 amount to 2,173 cars as compared to 2,223 for the entire last season. Growers are paid around $3 a ton for Danish cabbage and this stock is selling in central markets for $10 to $13 a ton.

Barron Completes Dam for Municipal Power

Barre, Wis.—The city of Barron, Barron county, at a cost of $35,000 has just completed a new concrete dam for developing municipal power. The river below the dam has been dredged at an additional cost of $15,000, giving the dam an additional three feet of head. The city has also purchased a half interest in the Taylor dam, half a mile below the new dam, which will be placed next year in a new dam. The latter, in addition to the power facilities available from the new dam, will give Barron one of the best municipal light, power and water plants in the state.

STATE SNOW PLOWS CHOSEN FOR WORK

Conferences with A. R. Hirst, state highway commissioner, and Division Engineer Baisley were held Thursday by Janesville's snow committees composed of William O'Connell, Charles Touten and Ira Iman. The committee gathered information from data of the state and experiments carried out last year. State machinery was inspected and an especially constructed snow plow selected for use on the work in Rock county. Other machinery was placed at the disposal of the committee but will not be taken now.

GRABER TO SPEAK AT HANOVER MEET

L. F. Graber, of the Wisconsin university agriculture department, will give the main address at the Rock County Farm Bureau meeting to be held in Hanover next Tuesday night. He is the county agent leader for southern Wisconsin and will speak on alfalfa and the importance of lime being used on farms here.

Edwin E. Moore, Fulton, today reported to county agent R. T. Glasco that the Fulton district is 100 percent in membership in the Rock County Farm Bureau.

TUMULTUOUS TO RESUME PRACTICE OF LAW

U. S. OFFERS NEW THRIFT SECURITIES

$1 and $25 Certificates to be Sold Starting First of Year.

Uncle Sam is offering new inducements for the small investor in a new series of treasury savings securities. Two new treasury savings securities will be added to the thrift series, a $1 certificate and a $25 certificate, according to Postmaster J. J. Cunningham.

The dollar certificate will be bright red, imprinted with a green tint and will bear the portrait of Alexander Hamilton, first secretary of the treasury. It will bear no interest, but when 25 of these are accumulated they may be exchanged for the $25 certificate, drawing interest similar to the $5 thrift stamp.

The entire thrift series will be issued in 1921, from the 25 cent savings stamp up to the $1,000 treasury certificate. More denominations to suit the means of almost every investor are provided under the new plan. The securities will mature January 1, 1921. A demand from the American Federation of Labor and fraternal and women's organizations for a safe investment for the working man led the government to provide securities with in reach of all, and in convenient form so an accumulation of the small or ones could be exchanged for the larger. The $25 certificate will be sold for $20 in January, for which the owner will be paid $25 in 1926. The plan of sale and interest is the same as for the $5 thrift stamp.

Treasury savings certificates draw interest at four per cent, compounded quarterly and are exempt from state and local taxes, and from normal federal income tax. They are redeemable substantially on demand. Their sale will be conducted mostly through the postoffice.

THOUSANDS IDLE IN ENGLAND; PLAN TO PROVIDE WORK

London, Dec. 17.—Unemployment in Great Britain which has been steadily growing, has created a serious problem, which during the last few days has become more urgent owing to severe weather.

Nearly every trade is affected. Unemployment is common among clerks and middle manual laborers. Official statistics show that about 500,000 are without occupation at present.

Labor circles declare the actual number of men out of employment is fully 1,000,000. Upon a majority of these there are dependents, and the total number of suffering is placed at from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000, a large part of them being former soldiers.

In several places municipalities and other organizations have begun improvement works, the cost of which will be paid out of local taxes. The national executive of the labor party yesterday passed a resolution declaring the "present scandal of innocent starving persons cannot be allowed to continue" and calling upon the government to maintain persons for whom no work is available.

The government is asked to pay each man 40 shillings per week and each woman 25 shillings with additional allowances for dependents. Meanwhile the government is giving close attention to the problem and Thomas J. MacNamara, minister of labor, announced yesterday a plan expected to provide work for 50,000 men in the construction of buildings.

IT LOOKS LIKE A "WHITE" CHRISTMAS

The weather man is trying hard to give Janesville a "white" Christmas, for the light snow of Thursday night remained long enough to make the people find out they had a snow storm.

Traffic on the pavements was endangered by a thin coat of ice and frozen slush. Horses had a hard time making slight grades, for few of them had been shod with cleats. The asphalt pavements were almost as slippery as glare ice. Auto drivers made haste to put on chains.

Mild and calm weather after the snow was at such a temperature to stop further freezing on the river. At no place is the river or lagoons safe for skating.

MOST STUDENTS WILL RETURN TO U. W.

Madison.—No student who has worked steadily and done his best at the university will be sent home at Christmas with a request not to return, according to a statement issued by Dean George C. Seltzer of the College of Letters and Science. Much of the talk about large numbers of students being expelled for low studies results from untrue newspaper stories, he said. His statement follows:

"No student who has been working steadily and doing his best is sent home at Christmas. Every hard-working student is given a full chance to find out whether he can or cannot do satisfactory college work. Only those students who have wasted their time in idleness, and thus are hopelessly behind in their work, are requested not to return after Christmas."

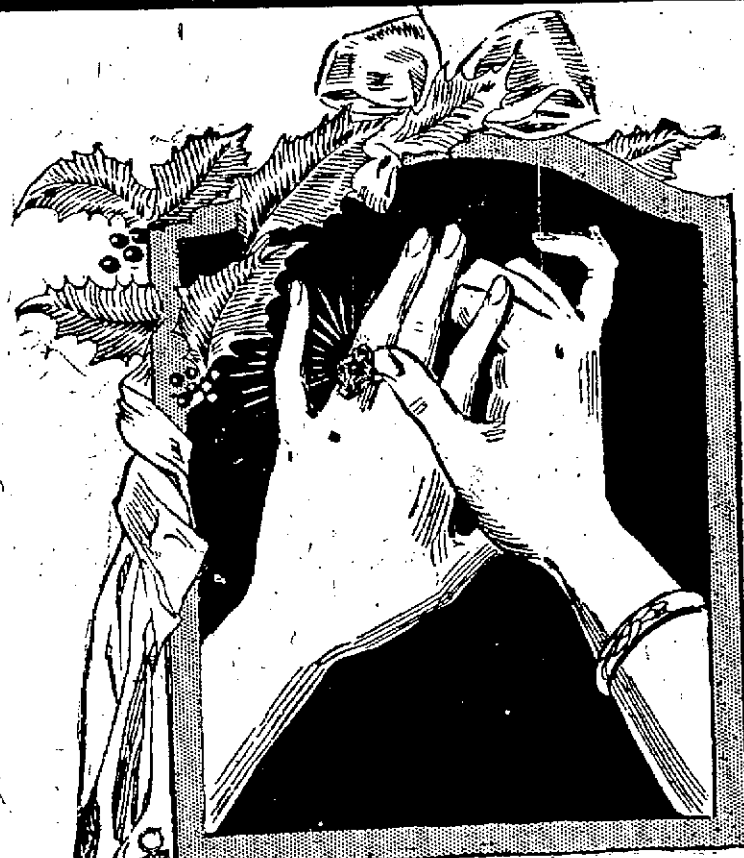

Cases of the latter sort are not numerous and students and their friends may rely upon it that every case of the kind is examined carefully and systematically by the executive committees of the different colleges.

INTERURBAN CAN BE RUN ON POWER FROM KILBOURN

By the simple process of throwing a switch, the entire system of interurbans of the Rockford Interurban company from here to Freeport, in case of an emergency, can be run on power furnished by the new plant of the Wisconsin River Power company at Kilbourn.

Up to a few days ago the entire system of the interurban company including the branch from Beloit to Janesville, was run on power developed by the Rockford Electric company and distributed at substations along the route. As announced a few days ago, power is now furnished the interurban company to run the system in Janesville and half way through the station of the Wisconsin River Power company.

The plant at Kilbourn furnishes power for Milwaukee, Delavan and Lake Geneva electric traction lines also. It cost more than $1,000,000 to build.
